Senior police officers around the country converged at the Special Support Group for the Botswana Police Service (BPS) 51st Annual Senior Officers Conference from 6th- 8th May 2025. The Conference serves as a vital forum for reflection, innovation, formulation of effective strategies. It was held under the theme: Innovative Approaches in Modern Policing; Closing Gaps and Building Trust.

The event was graced by Advocate Duma Gideon Boko, President of the Republic of Botswana, who officially opened the Conference. This was the President's first address to the conference since he assumed the highest office in the land late last year.

Also present at the occasion were, the Minister for State Presidency, Honourable Moeti Caesar Mohwasa, who is responsible for the Police, the Permanent Secretary to the President Ms Emmah Peloetletse and Ms Matshidiso Bokole, Deputy Permanent Secretary to the President. This year, the conference was a slight different from previous ones because delegates included station commanders and their equivalent, who are at the frontline in the fight against

In his address, Advocate Boko said although modern advances such as globalisation and Information Communication Technology (ICT), positively influence human and socio-economic development, they are, flip side, a catalyst for the increase in crimes such as terrorism financing, money laundering and cybercrime which are threats to public safety and security.

The President said the scenario calls for the BPS to strengthen security collaboration with other law enforcement agencies so as to mitigate the effects of emerging sophisticated crime. He called for a decisive transition toward technology-enabled policing in response to these emerging challenges. He emphasised the need to expand the deployment of drones for surveillance purposes as well as implementing digital reporting platforms to streamline processes and minimize reliance on manual documentation. "Accelerate the installation of Safe City cameras to enhance urban surveillance and strengthen crime prevention efforts. Augment human capability through technology to improve service delivery," he said.

The President reminded the delegates that their duty to the people of Botswana is to cultivate a policing system that is not only efficient and responsive but also compassionate, community-focused, and grounded on the highest principles of professionalism and ethical conduct. Advocate Duma Boko assured the BPS leadership that Government will continue to collaborate with key stakeholders to tackle emerging criminal trends and other pressing social issues of national importance.

He expressed hope that the Conference will generate valuable insights and innovative solutions to effectively address safety and security challenges. The President reminded police officers to uphold the highest standards of integrity, professionalism, impartiality, responsiveness, respect and merit in the discharge of their duties. "I urge all officers to prioritize the preservation of human life by respecting human rights and consistently operating within the realms of the law when executing your duties," the President said.

In her welcome remarks delivered at the conference, the Commissioner of police, Commissioner Dinah Marathe informed the President and his delegation that crime in the country is still manageable. The Commissioner said that there was an overall reduction of 8% of total crime recorded in 2024 compared to 2023. In the same vein Penal Code offences and violent and serious crime were also went down by 11% and 15 % respectively. Commissioner also shared road safety statistics, highlighting that there was a 12.6% reduction in road fatalities from 396 in 2023 to 346 the last year.

Despite these noticeable gains realised, the Commissioner bemoaned the level of violence and brutality used by perpetrators during the commission of offences like murder, rape and robbery which she said was a cause for concern. She also singled out notable factors like driving without due care and attention, driving at high speed, driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs and careless driving as some of the major contributors to road accidents in the country.

As response measures to crime and road safety, Commissioner stated that BPS will continue to employ initiatives that include but not limited to; community poling, law enforcement, use of technology to enhance crime investigation and detection as well as public education. She assured President Boko that BPS remain committed to aligning its strategies with national priorities by embracing innovation and reengineering processes for a peaceful and conducive environment to foreign direct investment.

to expanding our services through the establishment of victim-friendly facilities to ensure safety and confidentiality,” she said. She also emphasised the importance of swift responses to GBV reports and accessibility of services to all members of the public.

The Commissioner outlined cultural beliefs, economic hardship and substance abuse as some of the underlying causes of GBV. She said in most cases perpetrator of GBV are people well known to victims whom they trust and rely upon. She highlighted the stigma and fear often prevent victims from reporting abuse, despite growing awareness brought about by media and community efforts. Commissioner Marathe stressed the need for collective action at all levels, government, community and individual to address the root causes of GBV and improve support systems for survivors.

Commissioner Marathe underscored the church’s pivotal role in crime prevention, particularly given the rise in violence associated with criminal activities. She asked faith-based institutions to play a transformative role by addressing the root causes of violence and fostering a culture of mutual respect, love, and healthy relationships through initiatives such as premarital counselling and youth development programmes.

The workshop was held under the theme: Empowering by Faith, United in Purpose – Transforming Communities and Systems for a Just and Hopeful Future.

The United Congregational Church of Southern Africa (UCCSA) Trinity Church in Gaborone organised a Walk Against Gender Based Violence (GBV) and workshop to raise awareness about the scourge.

Minister of Youth and Gender Affairs, Honourable Lesego Chombo and the Commissioner of Police, Commissioner Dinah Marathe, were among the people who participated in the walk. The occasion was a powerful demonstration of solidarity and commitment to ending violence in all its forms.

Addressing participant at the end of the walk, Minister Chombo said GBV is not just a social problem, it is a moral and spiritual crisis that demands immediate and sustained attention. She said the number of GBV incidents are alarmingly high, placing the country amongst the most worrying in Africa.

to challenge harmful cultural, societal norms, that perpetuate GBV, advocate for protective policies and raise their voices against all forms of injustice. She called on the nation to work together to create a society where everyone regardless of gender feels safe, valued, and respected. “I urge every individual to rise and stand against gender-based violence and take a stand against injustice for a safer society.”

She assured Batswana that her Ministry will continue to support and promote education and awareness programmes about the root causes of GBV, to equip them with the knowledge and skills to prevent and respond to all forms of gender related violence.

In her remarks, Commissioner Marathe reaffirmed Botswana Police Service (BPS) unwavering commitment to public safety and security. The Commissioner said BPS is committed to extending our s creating victim-friendly spaces for survivors of GBV to ensure they receive the safety and confidentiality they rightfully deserve. “As a law enforcement, we are dedicated Botswana Police Service (BPS) continues to engage stakeholders and organisations beyond the country's borders to share ideas, forge strategic partnerships to develop effective crime prevention strategies, capacitate employees in key areas and to strengthen international cooperation in law enforcement. In line with this commitment, the Acting Commissioner of Police, Mr Solomon Mantswe, recently hosted the Czech Republic Ambassador to Botswana His Excellency Mr Tomas Ulicny, the of, for a Courtesy Call aimed at exploring areas of collaboration in fighting crime.

In his welcome remarks, the Acting Commissioner described the visit as a golden opportunity for enhancing bilateral law enforcement collaboration. He emphasised Botswana's commitment to international peace and security through its active membership in global bodies such as the United Nations and INTERPOL. The BPS, he said, remains focused on strengthening partnerships both locally and internationally to combat crime effectively.

The Acting Commissioner acknowledged ongoing challenges posed by globalisation and cyber threats.

He said that to tackle such modern crimes, the BPS has established a Cyber Forensics Branch and is seeking support in building capacity in this area. Mr Mantswe also called for cooperation in sharing of intelligence, secure communication systems, and enhanced traffic law enforcement.

The Acting Commissioner further appealed for assistance in expanding Safer City surveillance technologies which currently face limited coverage due to funding limitations. Mr Mantswe expressed confidence that the meeting would lay a solid foundation for strategic cooperation, ultimately contributing to safer communities and stronger digital security.

For his part, His Excellency Ulicny pledged support BPS in key law enforcement areas, particularly cybercrime, police training and traffic law enforcement. The Ambassador said the Czech Republic has built robust systems to deal with traffic-related offences, including speed control and overweight vehicles. He shared that, like Botswana, the Czech Republic handles heavy transit traffic due to its central location in Europe which require complex coordination between law enforcement agencies and local authorities.

Mr Ulicny emphasised that road safety remains a top priority and that the Czech model, which integrates enforcement, record systems, and inter-agency coordination, has proven effective and could benefit Botswana. He stressed that the success of these systems lies not only in technology but also in the development of appropriate legislation and enforcement standards.

Ambassador Ulicny further stated that the growing global digital threats in space noted calls for stronger cyber security capacities. He assured BPS that his country is also interest in cooperating with BPS in digital forensics, secure communication channels, and cybercrime investigations.

He also offered to assist in capacity-building through the Czech Republic's experienced training units, highlighting areas such as defensive and police operational tactics, firearms training, tactical first aid, K9 (dogs) breeding and training.

The Government of Botswana remains steadfast in its commitment to strengthening security infrastructure across the country. In alignment with this objective, the Botswana Police Service (BPS) launched the Adopt a Police Station initiative in 2024, appealing to the private sector to partner with the Police in the revitalisation and enhancement of police facilities countrywide. This collaborative effort seeks to improve operational capacity and service delivery through the refurbishment of police stations. Under this initiative, Phakalane Police Post was adopted by Aluminium 2000 (Pty) Ltd and partners, who played a pivotal role in transforming the facility into a more functional and modern policing environment.

The refurbished Post was handed over to BPS at a vibrant and optimistic ceremony graced by the Assistant Minister of Communications and Innovation and also Member of Parliament for Gaborone North, Honourable Shawn Ntlhaile. The event marked a significant milestone in the ongoing Adopt a Police Station initiative.

In his keynote address, Assistant Minister Ntlhaile said the refurbishment of the Police Post demonstrates a solid partnership between the Police and private sector in the fight against crime. He highlighted that the rapid growth of Phakalane as a residential and economic hub, demands significant increase in public safety and property security initiatives.

The Assistant Minister urged companies and individuals with the means and expertise to demonstrate social responsibility by contributing to community development and economic advancement. "To date, 70 police facilities have been adopted by various companies, with refurbishments completed at seven locations, including Phakalane," he revealed. He appreciated the refurbished facility adding that there was need for further improvement to address evolving urban crime in the area. Honourable Ntlhaile reaffirmed Government's commitment to inclusive engagement and equitable resource allocation, calling on citizens to actively contribute towards shaping Botswana's future.

The Assistant Minister said the Government

remain committed to inclusive engagement and equitable resource allocation for national development, calling on all citizens to contribute towards shaping country's future. Honourable Ntlhaile stressed the importance of collective action in combating crime, particularly murder, rape defilement gender based and are often linked perpetuated by drug abuse. He assured Batswana that Government will continued support initiatives aimed at addressing these social ills to reduce their occurrence and impact on society.

The Assistant Minister further commended local businesses for supporting Government efforts in improving police infrastructure amidst budgetary constraints. He extended special gratitude to Phakalane Estates Management, for donating the plot on which the Police Post stands and to Aluminum 2000 company and its partners, for leading the innovation works.

When welcoming guests earlier on, the Commissioner of Police, Commissioner Dinah Marathe stated that the Adopt a Police Station initiative a reflection of a true partnership between the police and the business community in the fight against crime. She noted that BPS e initiative will not only improve the physical outlook of police facilities but also enhance its strategic response to crime and reinforce the Organisation's law enforcement capabilities.

Commissioner Marathe pointed out that some of the challenges facing the BPS including outdated infrastructure and limited resources. She said the Adopt a Police Station initiative was designed to complement Government efforts to providing enough resources to the police. "This is more than a facelift; it is an investment in the foundation of our policing capability," she said. She conveyed her deepest gratitude to Aluminium 2000 and partners for transforming the Police Post from a porta cabin into a modern, functional facility. "We are extremely appreciative of this kindness which we believe will go a long way in consolidating and multiplying your returns," she said. The Commissioner reaffirmed BPS commitment to modernising police operations through the use of technology and community engagement.

Meanwhile, Managing Director of Aluminium 2000, Mr. Kelvin Saunders said the project as a symbol of Phakalane community's collective vision and unity for development. "What once stood as a basic structure has now been transformed into the functional and modern facility we see today," he said. He extended sincere appreciation to all partner companies for their generosity and collaborative spirit, which were instrumental in bringing the project to completion.

FAMILIARISATION TOUR OF ILEA

Acting Commissioner of Police Mr Solomon Mantswe embarked on a conducted tour of the International Law Enforcement Academy (ILEA) in Otse yesterday (14/05/2025) to familiarise himself with the operational functions, accomplishments and challenges faced by the Academy.

ILEA, established in 2000, is a partnership between the Governments of the United States of America and Botswana that provides training for law enforcement officers from across the African continent to combat transnational organised crime, terrorism, cybercrime, drug trafficking, human trafficking, and financial crimes.

When addressing the ILEA staff, he said the visit was crucial for him to appreciate its operational and administrative mandate. He further said fostering positive relations between the Governments of the United States of America and Botswana was also imperative. He observed that the ongoing partnership offers mutual support and reinforces bilateral ties.

He said the Botswana Police Service (BPS) will continue to provide support whenever possible to facilitate the seamless operation of ILEA Gaborone by maintaining its essential role of providing effective training, knowledge sharing, and skill development, which are crucial for tackling the complex security challenges encountered by the global community.

As a beneficiary and partner nation, the Acting Commissioner noted that Botswana is determined to utilise the training opportunities to enhance its capacity and capability to address criminality that threatens public security. He said it was important for law enforcement officers to uphold ethical standards in safeguarding human rights.

Mr Mantswe informed the staff that the current Administration has prioritised public security as an important element that fosters national peace, stability, and socio-economic development. He, therefore, encouraged them to align with the new Government's vision priorities, which also aim to protect citizens' rights.

For her part, Managing Director ILEA, Senior Assistant Commissioner of Police Thateng Ludo Johwa-Mpundisi, noted that ILEA Gaborone has trained over 18,000 law enforcement officers and justice personnel since its inception. She also appreciated the stewardship and guidance offered by the BPS leadership.

BPS DONATES TO RED CROSS

In a heartwarming event Botswana Police Service (BPS) officers have once again demonstrated their commitment to uplifting the lives of vulnerable members of the communities through their social responsibility programmes. This spirit of giving and caring for the less privileged was reinforced on April 1, 2025, when the Police Women Network under Criminal Investigations Department (CID) Headquarters, donated clothing items to the Botswana Red Cross Society (BRCS in Gaborone.

Speaking at the handing over ceremony, Superintendent Mable Letladitswe emphasized that the gesture was more than just a donation, it symbolise the organisation's deep rooted values of caring and solidarity. "This act aligns with our social responsibility policy and reflects our commitment to supporting disadvantaged communities," she stated. Ms Letladitswe also highlighted the importance of collaboration between law enforcement and humanitarian agencies such as BRCS, noting that working together enables more effective responses to the social challenges faced by the people Reflecting on the cultural significance of giving, Superintendent Letladitswe remarked that the spirit of generosity resonates deeply within the Setswana way of life. "In our culture, giving is a reflection of compassion and unity. It reminds us that we are stronger when we support one another," she said.

Receiving the donation on behalf of the Red Cross, Head of Operations Business Development Ms Boitumelo Cornelious-Moloi expressed her heartfelt gratitude for gesture displayed by the officers, describing the contribution as timely and vital. "This support comes at a crucial moment, helping us to reach individuals and families facing socio-economic hardships, health emergencies, and natural disasters," she said.

Ms Cornelius-Moloi said she was hopeful that the partnerships would continue to strengthen, ensuring that vulnerable members of society receive the immediate care and assistance they need to rebuild their lives and restore hope.

As Botswana continues to face social and economic challenges, initiatives like this donation serve as a powerful reminder of the nation's collective resilience and the vital role that organizations from police to humanitarian groups play in fostering a caring, supportive society. With ongoing cooperation and shared commitment, Botswana moves closer to building a future where no one is left behind.

In a landmark act of corporate social responsibility, China Zinzhu, has donated a Community Service Centre to Maun Police Station. The initiative aims to strengthen the collaborative relationship between the police and the business community, particularly in efforts to promote safety, emergency responsiveness, and public trust.

The donation, valued at P300 000 00 was officially opened by the Commissioner of Police. The new centre, located within Maun Police premises, is equipped with modern facilities including a reception, receiving office and a referral office.

Speaking at the handover ceremony, Commissioner Marathe applauded Zhengtai for its commitment to serving community since arrival in Maun in 2019. She emphasized the importance of public-private partnerships in strengthening law enforcement and hailed the donation as a welcome gesture of corporate social responsibility during these times when the country is facing economic challenges.

She expressed gratitude at the business community for embracing the Adopt-A-Police Station initiative and encouraged others to come on board and revitalize police infrastructure across the country.

Commissioner Marathe highlighted that Maun and surrounding areas recorded a 8.3% decrease in crime between the year 2023 and 2024. She attributed the success to community policing and called for continued collaboration to address emerging challenges, including Gender Based Violence (GBV), drug abuse, cybercrime, and road fatalities.

COMMUNITY SERVICE CENTRE

“Your continued support and sacrifices are a driving force behind our quest for continuous service improvement and transformation.”

In his remarks, Zhengtai Group Director, Mr Stephen Liu said that the police play an indispensable role in ensuring the security and safety of the people hence the need to assist them to fulfil their mandate.

“We believe that this new facility will enhance the BPS’ ability to serve the people of Maun with even greater efficiency and dignity,” he said.

The Director added that the project is a testament to their commitment to support communities in which their

It is now official that Police XI, aka The Jungle Kings, are back in the First National Bank (FNB) Premier League. Following a tough 2024/2025 First Division South League Campaign, they were officially crowned the Champions yesterday (29/05/2025) in Mmopane, after an encounter with Holy Ghost Football Club.

As dawn broke over the dusty Holy Ghost FC Grounds in Mmopane, the first rays of sunlight spilt like molten gold across the pitch, a sight befitting the triumphant Jungle Kings.

In their signature gold kit, the Jungle Kings lads ceremonially honoured their last fixture against Holy Ghost FC like real Champions, not conceding or losing the game. The game ended in a goalless draw.

For Coach Padzayi Mandivenga and his technical team, this wasn't just the last game of the season; it was a mission accomplished. He promised at the beginning to take the team back to its glory days, and he delivered. Well done, coach!

"I commend Holy Ghost FC for their performance in this game. They pressed high, defended with determination, and gave us a tough final test, but we had a plan and stuck to it," commented Coach Mandivenga to a local media outlet.

The match unfolded with intensity and flashes of creativity from both sides, but neither could find a breakthrough. The defenders held firm, goalkeepers stayed alert, and the deadlock remained unbroken until the last minute when the day's referee blew the whistle to mark the official end of the gruelling campaign.

It was a crucial day game and day, even in the corridors of power at Police Headquarters. The eye witnesses were the maroon and gold-clad faithful supporters. However, the game attracted the Police leadership, who found it imperative to be in attendance.

The Deputy Commissioners, Mr Solomon Mantswe, Support Services and Katlholo Mosimanegape, Operations, graced the occasion and physically witnessed each moment as the captain, Kagiso Dithebe, lifted the Championship trophy. Well done, team!

As for Police XI Management, they remained focused on the day they were unceremoniously relegated to the day the Jungle Kings were back. Well done, Chairperson, Assistant Commissioner of Police, Elizabeth Mamapilo and your team!

For the supporters, you were a marvel to watch even when the going seemed tough. Well done!

To the players, what more can we ask for? Superlative! Well done, boys! As for the FNB Premiership league teams, the Jungle Kings are back. To be forewarned is to be forearmed!!

In the silence of our minds, in the soft, quiet air
We remember you
Through dawn's first light and evening's glow
Together, marching in step, row by row
Sweat rolling down our back
We remember you!

You walked cold nights and sunny days patrolling the streets
stood in bleeding rains to secure our roadways
Comrades in struggle....we remember!

A hero's soul never dies, You are still the guardians of peace
Now resting in shadow, far from sight
Beyond the sky shading light
We remember you

Though departed, in our hearts forever you remain
we honour your lives, we honour the price you paid your legacy continues to echo through the streets
the sky continues to be blue as it gains more men in blue.
